Rules of civility and decorum in company and conversation by George Washington

1. Every action in company ought to be with some sign of respect to those present.

2. In the presence of others sing not to your self with a humming noise, nor drum with your fingers on feet.

3. Let your discourse with men of business be short and comprehensive.
Some suppose fancy to be a standing dish to feed upon through life. But let me give a word to the wise; fancy is mere broth, a little family tree blows it away, and it is gone.

You embark proper by most precious on a most tempestuous ocean; for as you possess the highest reputation, so you expose it to the prejurious chance of popular opinion. Mrs. Gouverneur Morris to G. Washington

1. How are my powers all torn
   From my youth my head
   Is gone
   And pleasure is forgot.

2. How are my blooming years
   Disgraced
   With pains and heavy hearts!
   How is my sweetness defaced
   With sighs and groans and tears?

3. How is my enemy prone to rise
   When I the healthy view,
   How do I raise my plaintive cries
   And wish for soundness
   Of all the earth would bring
   Lot with all its glittering mild,
   So not withhold the smaller spot
   But give it all for health.

4. If gold could buy my health
   Restore me back from pain
   And leg the door from door to
   And purchase health again.

5. But where is now my humble trust
   In God Almighty's care?

Susanna Harrison.

How incredible to a lovely female to prefer the improvement of her more lovely perfection—her mind

Than to be found in the haunts of riot and jollity.
6. Come not near the books or writings of anyone else as to read them unasked. Also, look not high when another is writing letter. Read no letters, books or papers in company, but if when there is a necessity for doing if you must ask leave.

3. Sleep not when others speak, sit not when others stand, speak not when you should hold your peace and, wake not when others sleep.

My dear Thos.

Hearing that you have at length launched your bark upon the uncertain ocean of matrimony, I would not be the last to offer my congratulations. May a fair wind and a steady breeze constantly fill your sails, and with Prudence at your helm and Reason for your Pilot, I doubt not but that you will weather the Cape of Repeal and where you may moor your vessel, secured by the cable of Mental Torbearance attached to the anchor of Friendship.

During your voyage upon this troubled ocean, I will not suppose but that for a squally met with, however by precaution they will cause you to enjoy the succeeding calm with a greater good.
